VOL. 26. No. 40

The May Merchandise Movement

BEGINS NOW WITH EXTRAORDINARY BARGAIN OPPORTUNITIES IN MANY DEPARTMENTS OF MEDINA COUNTY'S BIGGEST, BEST AND BUSIEST STORE

This page of special May offerings fully exemplifies this store's value-giving supremacy. From top to bottom this big store is filled with values that no other store can match. Not that we buy our goods for less than all stores do—we don't claim that, though we own our merchandise at as low a figure as any house in Texas but we're satisfied with less. We mark our goods regularly at a LOWER margin of profit. We KNOW this and YOU know it, too, if you are a customer of this store. Many of these regular low prices are lowered again for the MAY SALE. They are in nearly every department.

CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE !

No store here or in this neighborhood has ever offered such an assemblage of pretty and useful China and Glassware as is now displayed in our establishment. Not only can we show you the greatest variety, but are prepared to offer you the most extraordinary value. A call will convince you.

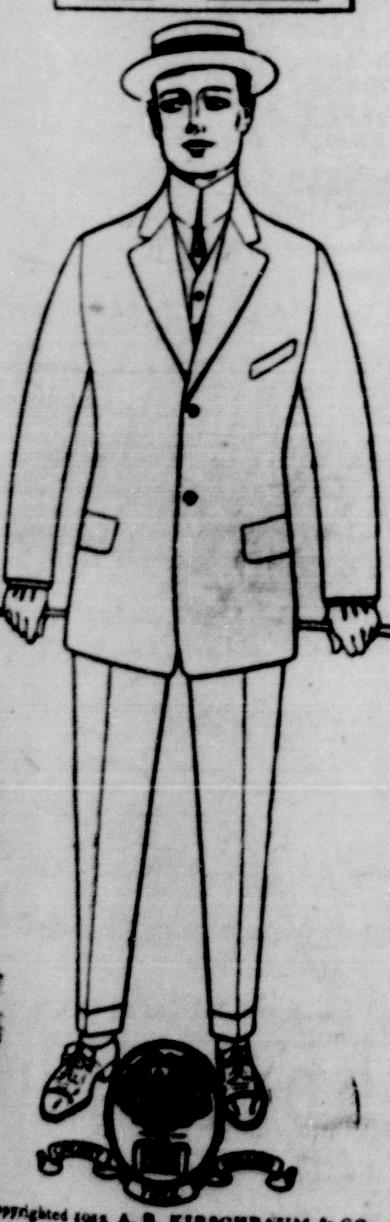

Comparison will prove conclusively that our values are greatest and we are willing that you compare our values with those on sale anywhere. It's easy for a store to CLAIM to undersell, but PROVING it is another question. You should satisfy YOURSELF that you're getting the most for your money—and there's no better way to do it than by comparison. Years of "merchandising on the square" have earned us a reputation for superior value-giving, and with larger and more complete stocks than ever, we offer you, if anything, GREATER VALUES THAN EVER BEFORE.

Our Premium Department Is The Talk Wherever You Go

Trading at SCHMITT & STEINHARDT'S enables you to share in the profits to the extent of 5 per cent and it's all so simple, too—all you need to do is to collect our Premium Tickets given free on Dry Goods and Furnishings and exchange them for useful and ornamental articles in our Premium Department. This feature of our business is FREE TO EVERYBODY without exception. Don't fail to ask for tickets.

Kirschbaum Clothes

FRANK TRUMBULL

Houston, Texas, April—Mr. Frank Trumbull, Chairman of the board of directors of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, and one of the most successful railroad men in the country, who addressed the Texas Welfare Commission in this city Tuesday the 30th, ultimo, suggested an amendment to the stock and bond law that will permit the Railroad Commission to issue securities equal to the value of their property.

It is said by those familiar with the situation that such a change in our law would result in many miles of railroad being built in Texas.

The Railroad Commission values all railroad property in the state at $210,000,000, the Tax Commission at $410,000,000, and the railroads—value their property at $550,000,000.

Bad Spells

"I suffered, during girlhood, from womanly weakness," writes Mrs. Mollie Navy, of Walnut, N. C. "At last, I was almost bed-ridden, and had to give up. We had three doctors. All the time, I was getting worse. I had bad spells, that lasted from 7 to 28 days. In one week, after I gave Cardui a trial, I could eat, sleep, and joke, as well as anybody. In 8 weeks, I was well. I had been an invalid for 5 weary years! Cardui relieved me, when everything else failed."

TAKE CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

If you are weak and ailing, think what it would mean, to you, to recover as quickly as Mrs. Navy did. For more than 50 years, this purely vegetable, tonic remedy, for women, has been used by thousands of weak and ailing sufferers. They found it of real value in relieving their aches and pains. Why suffer longer? A remedy that has relieved and helped so many, is ready, at the nearest drug store, for use, at once, by you. Try it, today.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system. THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who doesn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine or known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

Mrs. Norris Makes Statement Regarding Husband.

Mrs. Norris makes the following statement: My husband bought a bottle of Hunt's Lightning Oil for Rheumatism. He has been bothered for over two years. It has done him a great deal of good and he thinks it will cure him. Mrs. Mollie Norris, Colbert, Ok. There is nothing better for Rheumatism, Neuralgia and the like.

Instead of laughing at the mistakes of others, try to profit by your own.

"Nails"

"Nails are a mighty good thing—particularly finger nails—but I don't believe they were intended solely for scratching, though I used mine largely for that purpose for several years. I was sorely afflicted, and had it to do. One application of Hunt's Cure, however, relieved my itch, and less than one box cured me entirely." J. M. Ward, Index, Texas.

"Come Unto Me"

"Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Matthew 11:28.

Oh! here's a beautiful invitation

Extended to every tongue and nation

"Come unto me!"

Christ, the Savior, had humble birth

That sin should not curse this fair earth,

That man to man be a brother

And lovingly help each other

"Come unto me!"

Oh, do ye not hear the Savior calling,
All ye who are weary and are falling?

"Come unto me!"

All ye who are worn and weary

Of sin's path-way sad and dreary,

"And I will give you rest"—the rest

Of the calm, sweet peace of the blest!

"Come unto me!"

Yes, Christ, the Savior, on the cross hath died
That we may now lay our burden aside—

"Come unto me!"

"Come unto me!"

Oh! give us faith to heed, to hear
The words so loving and so dear,

That we in that sweet peace may live

Which only His bounty can give!

"Come unto me!"

Christ has risen to his beautiful throne
And lovingly calls you to be his own—

"Come unto me!"

"Come unto me!"

Will ye not heed his gentle voice,
Be rested and with Him rejoice?

Rejoice in the love of the King

And the ransomed's sweet anthems sing!

"Come unto me!"

THE fellow who cuts all of the profit out of a job and works for fun needs to get lots of fun out of his work to profit by it!

ANYWAY, if you failed to save your country by naming your favorite candidate you can still serve it by cutting weeds and swatting flies!

THE present Republican scrap is causing many an ambition to be a Democratic postmaster to sprout in the elysian fields of a militant Democracy's hope!

THE rains of this week have done some damage to oats but have been fine on the corn. If they will keep up Medina County will harvest a bumper crop of that cereal this fall.

THE Hondo Anvil Herald thinks that conclusive evidence is the kind that conforms to your side of the case. And this reminds us that the theory of rotation in office is only urged when the fellow in doesn't suit you or that the precedent of two terms is only permissible when it is your friend who is running for re-election. After all, the point of view usually affects the case.—Houston Post.

THE indifference of the average citizen to matters political is appalling. It is safe to say that not more than fifteen per cent of the democracy of Texas participated in the selection of a candidate for the presidency in last Saturday's primary. In republican councils conditions were even worse. In our own county, it is said with sorrow, a hundred or less voters named the county's choice for candidates of both the leading parties for the highest office in the land while the other thirteen hundred treated the matter with absolute indifference. Such things should not be.

IF Saturday's primary taught any lesson at all to the anti-prohibitionists of Texas it should be the folly and the danger of indifference and division. The support of Woodrow Wilson was centralized upon him for the simple reason that he is a prohibitionist. On the other hand, the opposition to Wilson was either indifferent or scattered its forces upon several other candidates with the result that it will turn up impotent in the State Convention. A similar mistake in the July primary and Texas will be a dry state in another twelve months. What say you?

WE are profoundly sorry for our friend Getzendaner of the Uvalde Leader-News. The Southwest Texas Press Association elected him President of the Association and he will have to hold the convention in Ft. Stockton next year. Ft. Stockton is a long ways and the walking is not good in those parts.

To Our Friends and The Public Generally.

The vacation period will soon be at hand and many of you, perhaps, are already forming plans for your annual outing. Will you not permit us to assist in planning your vacation trip this year?

We are prepared to furnish detailed information as to the cost of railroad and sleeper fares to all principal resorts in the United States, Canada and Mexico, and on request, will be glad to furnish descriptive matter of any resorts which it is contemplated to visit.

The L. & G. N.—Iron Mountain lines form the direct route from San Antonio to St. Louis, and operate between these points, daily, two solid, fast, modern trains, one leaving San Antonio at 1:55 p.m., reaching St. Louis at 8:30 p.m. the following day, and the other leaving at 8 p.m. and reaching St. Louis at 7:27 a.m. the second morning. There are no changes en route.

These trains consist of electric lighted drawing room sleepers of the latest design, handsomely equipped dining cars (meals à la carte), and free reclining chair cars. At St. Louis direct connection is made in Union Station with fast trains for the Northern and Eastern resorts.

We have a splendid service also to the Northwest or West, concerning which it will afford us pleasure to write you on request.

We take this opportunity of calling attention to the fact that the I. & G. N. Railway has an unsurpassed service to Central and North Texas points, namely, New Braunfels, San Marcos, Austin, Waco, Fort Worth and Dallas. Your local agent will be pleased to give any information desired in this connection.

Thanking you for past favors and soliciting a continuance of your patronage, we remain,

Yours very truly,

Precinct Primaries.

So far as we have learned only four precincts out of the nineteen in Medina County held Democratic primary conventions Saturday, May 4th. These were Precincts No. 1, North Hondo, No. 6, Castroville, No. 10, Devine, and No. 16, South Hondo. All of these precincts instructed for Woodrow Wilson for President. Only three of these precincts were represented in the County Convention, a proxy from Castroville sent to the County Chairman not reaching him until after the Convention on account of a delayed train.

The Republicans of Hondo precinct held a primary at seven-thirty o'clock p.m. Saturday and endorsed Theodore Roosevelt for President. This action of the precinct was unanimously endorsed and adopted by the Republican County Convention Tuesday.

Democratic County Convention.

Pursuant to call of the County Chairman, a Democratic County Convention convened at the Courthouse in Hondo at 2:30 o'clock p.m. Tuesday May 7th.

Ed de Montel was elected chairman and W. C. Redus of Devine Secretary. The usual committees were appointed.

The committee on credentials reported three precincts represented and, on the basis of one vote to each twenty-five or major fraction thereof votes cast for governor at the last democratic primary, entitled to vote in the convention as follows:

Precinct 1, North Hondo, seventeen delegates and entitled to three votes.

Precinct 10, Devine, eight delegates and entitled to five votes.

Precinct 16, South Hondo, nineteen delegates and entitled to five votes.

On recommendation of the committee on permanent organization, the temporary organization was made permanent.

Whereupon, the report of the committee on resolutions was unanimously adopted as follows:

"Whereas, we have an abiding faith in the democracy of Woodrow Wilson, and his pre-eminent qualifications to represent the militant democracy before the country in the coming campaign—

"Therefore, be it resolved, that we favor the nomination of Woodrow Wilson as the Democratic Candidate for President, and hereby instruct our delegates to the State Convention to be held at Houston May 28th to cast the vote of Medina County for Woodrow Wilson, as long as his name is before the Convention, and to vote as a unit upon all things voted upon in the Convention.

"Be it further resolved, that the delegates present at the State Convention are hereby instructed to cast the full vote of the delegation."

The following delegates were elected to the said State Convention: John T. Briscoe, S. P. Webb, J. A. Kercheville, Mac Kercheville, J. C. Thompson, V. H. Blocker, D. H. Fly, E. W. Lacy, Geo. W. Jones, Fletcher Davis, H. E. Haas, H. G. Henderson, J. T. Fitz-Simon, Elmer de Montel, T. H. Reynolds, A. T. Forst, D. W. Short, Geo. Muehnik, Ed de Montel, G. C. Morris, W. C. Redus, J. K. Evans, Ira Kercheville, Marshall Hicks, L. G. Denman and George Armstead.

Do that!

Mother's Day.

To-morrow is Mother's Day!

"Children,  honour thy father and mother  that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth."

Thus spake a wise man of old, and he who is wise in his generation honors them every day; honors them not alone in filial obedience and affection but, no matter where fate has taught his footsteps to stray, honors them by so ordering those footsteps as to honor those whose name he bears.

But to-morrow is a special Day given to the honor of Mother!

Do something special for her to-morrow!

If she is in the land of the living you doubtless know what will please her most.

Do that!

And make every day thereafter Mother's Day!

If so be that she has passed to that bourn whence no traveller e're returns it is a sweetly solemn thought that she may be near us still in spirit!

And if it so be that souls in bliss reck of what we do here may we not make even her heaven more perfect by honoring her memory by a more God-like walk while here?—by being what we know she would have us become?

Mother—heaven's first and best gift to man! Mother—the first to rejoice with us in hope; the last to abandon us to despair! Mother!—Mother!—

" In the Heavens above, The angels, whispering to one another, Can find, among their burning terms of love, None so devotional as that of 'Mother'!"

THE Republicans of Medina County have gone on record for Roosevelt and the third term innovation!

"The Mystery of the Maine", a feature film, was exhibited to a large audience at the Lyric theatre Wednesday evening. This film is highly educational in its nature, affording better idea of the stupendous engineering feat of raising the wreck of the battle ship than could be had from any source aside from actually witnessing the work.

Good rains fell here Saturday, Sunday and Monday amounting in all to a precipitation of three inches. Oats that were cut down or were far advanced towards maturity were damaged to some extent, but the benefit to other crops, especially corn, will be almost incalculable. While the rain was pretty general the precipitation was much lighter in some localities than in Hondo.

Filomeno Granado, a Mexican aged about thirty-two years, was struck by a passing freight train about five o'clock Monday morning and received a blow on the head that rendered him unconscious. A companion came in from the scene of the accident, about three miles west of town, and reported the matter to the sheriff who responded with the county physician, Dr. W. H. Smith, and the injured man was brought to town and made as comfortable as possible, but after lingering until one o'clock Tuesday afternoon, he died without having ever regained consciousness. An inquest held by Judge A. M. Larim found that deceased came to his death from being struck by a train. His companion claims that they were walking along the track and sat down to rest. While they were resting the train came upon them and his companion failed to get out of the way in time.

At the precinct convention of Precinct No. 16, held Saturday, May 4th, J. G. Newton was endorsed for appointment as precinct chairman of said precinct to succeed J. S. Monkhouse who has moved out of the precinct. The call for a meeting of the Executive Committee to meet at the courthouse at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon failed for want of a quorum. A meeting of the committee to convene at a future date will be issued later. It is absolutely essential, in order to hold a successful primary election in July, that an active committeeman be found in each precinct in the county and the Chairman would like to hear from each precinct that is without such a committeeman suggestions as to whom to appoint that the affairs of the party may be properly looked after and the full strength of the party be brought to the polls at the July primary.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Edith Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphian girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her.

CHAPTER II.—His persistent wooing shrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer.

CHAPTER III.—Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help.

CHAPTER IV.—Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them.

CHAPTER V.—White Enid is bathing in the river in fancied solitude, a big bear appears on the bank and is about to plunge into the water to attack the girl when a shot rings out and the animal is killed by a strange man.

CHAPTER VI.—Enid is caught in a storm which wrecks her party's camp. She is dashed upon the rocks and injured. The strange man who shot the bear finds her unconscious and carries her to shelter.

CHAPTER VII.—Members of the camp party realizing that Enid is lost in the storm institute a frantic search for the missing girl.

CHAPTER VIII.—No trace of her is found and word is telegraphed to her father, James Armstrong, asking him to send his hands when the telegram arrives expressing the belief that the girl is dead. Armstrong says he will find her, and Maitland agrees to their marriage if he succeeds.

CHAPTER IX.—Enid regains consciousness in the hut of the man who had rescued her from the bear, and he dresses her foot which had been severely injured.

CHAPTER X.—The girl spends a fairly comfortable night, but her host in the next room a restless one as he lives over thoughts that are gone. He has some secret in his life.

CHAPTER XI.—Morning finds Enid refreshed and ready for the substantial breakfast the man has prepared for her.

CHAPTER XII.—Her rescuer goes in search of Enid's party, but returns at nightfall alone and unsuccessful. In his absence she discovers books which show him to be a man of education.

CHAPTER XIII.—Enid finds that she must remain in the mountains until her foot is better and the mountain trails passable, or permit her companion to leave her alone for a week while he goes in search of help. She decides to have him remain with her.

CHAPTER XIV.—A whole month passes before Enid's foot is thoroughly well and in the meantime she discovers that she is in love with the strange silent man who intrudes himself as little as possible on her notice.

CHAPTER XV.—The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained.

She would not have been human if her mind had not dwelt upon the world beyond the sky-line on the other side of the range. She knew how those who loved her must be suffering on account of her disappearance, but knowing herself safe and realizing that within a short time, when the spring came again, she would go back to them and that their mourning would be turned into joy by her arrival, she could not concern herself very greatly over their present feelings and emotions; and besides, what would be the use of worrying over those things? There was metal more attractive for her thoughts close at hand. And she was too blissfully happy to entertain for more than a moment any sorrow.

She pictured often her return and never by any chance did she think of going back to civilization alone. The man she loved would be by her side, the church's blessing would make them one. To do her justice, in the simplicity and purity of her thoughts she never once thought of what the world might say about that long winter sojourn alone with this man. She was so conscious of her own innocence and of his delicate forbearance, she never once thought how humanity would raise its eyes and fairly cry upon her from the house tops. She did not realize that were she ever so pure and so innocent she could not now or ever reach the high position which Caesar, who was none too re-utable himself, would fain have his wife enjoy!

CHAPTER XV.

The Man's Heart.

Now, love produces both happiness and unhappiness, but on the whole I think the happiness predominates, for love itself if it be true and high is its own reward. Love may feel itself unworthy and may shrink even from the unlatching of the shoe lace of the beloved, yet it joys in its own existence nevertheless. Of course its greatest satisfaction is in the return, but there is a sweetness even in the despair of the truly loving.

Enid Maitland, however, did not have to endure indifference, or fight against a passion which met with no response, for this man loved her with a love that was greater even than her own. The moon, in the trite aphorism, looks on many brooks, the brook sees no moon but the one above him in the heavens. In one sense his merit in winning her affection for himself from the hundreds of men she knew, was the greater; in many years he had only seen this one woman. Naturally she should be everything to him. She represented to him not only the woman but womankind. He had been a boy practically when he had buried himself in those mountains, and in all that time he had seen nobody like Enid Maitland. Every argument which had been exploited to show why she should love him could be turned about to account for his passion for her. They are not necessary, they are all supererogatory, idle words. To him also love had been born in an hour. It had flashed into existence as if from the fiat of the Divine.

Oh, he had fought against it. Like the crevices of old he had been scourged into the desert by remorse and another passion, but time had done its work. The woman he first loved had ministered not to the spiritual side of the man, or if she had so ministered in any degree it was because he had looked at her with a glamour of inexperience and youth. During those five years of solitude, of study and of reflection, the truth had gradually unrolled itself before him. Conclusions vastly at variance with what he had ever believed possible as to the woman upon whom he had first bestowed his heart, had gone into his being and were in solution there; this present woman was the precipitant which brought them to life. He knew now what the old appeal of his wife had been. He knew now what the new appeal of this woman was.

In humanity two things in life are inextricably intermingled, body and soul. Where the function of one begins and the function of the other ends no one is able to say. In all human passions are admixtures of the earth earthly. We are born the sons of old Adam as we are reborn the sons of the New. Passions are complex. As in harvest wheat and tares grow together until the end, so in love earth and heaven mingle ever.

He remembered a clause from an ancient marriage service he had read. "With my body I thee worship," and with every fibre of his physical being, he loved this woman.

It would be idle to deny that, impossible to disguise the facts, but in the melting pot of passion the preponderant ingredient was mental and spiritual; and just because higher and holier things predominated, he held her in his heart a sacred thing. Love is like a rose: the material part is the beautiful blossom; the spiritual factor is the fragrance which abides in the rose jar even after every leaf has faded away, or which may be expressed from the soft petals by the hard circumstances of pain and sorrow until there is left nothing but the lingering perfume of the flower.

His body trembled if she laid a hand upon him; his soul thirsted for her; present or absent he conjured before his tortured brain the sweetness that inhabited her breast. He had been clear-sighted enough in analyzing the past, he was neither clear-sighted nor coherent in thinking of the present. He worshiped her, he could have thrown himself upon his knees to her; if it would have added to her happiness, she could have killed him, smiling at her. Rode she in the Juggernaut car of the ancient idol, with his body, would he have unhesitatingly paved the way and have been glad of the privilege. He longed to compass her with sweet observances. The world revenged itself upon him for his long neglect, it had summed up in this one woman all its charm, its beauty, its romance, and had thrust her into his very arms. His was one of those great passions which illuminate the records of the past. Paolo had not loved Francesca more.

Oh, yes, the woman knew he loved her. It was not in the power of mortal man no matter how iron his restraint, how absolute the imposition of his will, to keep his heart hidden, his passion undisclosed. No one could keep such things secret, his love for her cried aloud in a thousand ways, even his look when he dared to turn his eyes upon her was eloquent of his feeling. He never said a word, however, he held his lips at least fettered and bound for he believed that honor and its obligations weighed down the balance upon the contrary side to which his inclinations lay.

He was not worthy of this woman. In the first place all he had to offer her was a blood stained hand. That might have been overcome in his mind; but pride in his self punishment, his resolution to withdraw himself, his resolution to withdraw such time as God completed his expiation and signified his acceptance of the penitent by taking away his life, held him inexorably.

The dark face of his wife rose before him. He forced himself to think upon her, she had loved him, she had given him all that she could. He remembered how she had pleaded with him that he take her on that last and most dangerous of journeys, her devotion to him had been so great she could not let him go out of her sight a moment, he thought fatuously! And he killed her. In the queer tumult of his brain he blessed himself for everything. He could not be false to his purpose, false to her memory, unworthy of the passion in which he believed she had held him and which he believed he had inspired.

If he had gone out in the world, after her death he might have forgotten most of these things, he might have lived them down. Saner clearer views would have come to him. His morbid self-reproach and self-consciousness would have been changed. But he had lived with them alone for five years and now there was no putting them aside. Honor and pride, the only things that may successfully fight against love, overcome him. He had represented to him not only the woman but womankind.

He had been a boy practically when he had buried himself in those mountains, and in all that time he had seen nobody like Enid Maitland. Every argument which had been exploited to show why she should love him could be turned about to account for his passion for her. They are not necessary, they are all supererogatory, idle words. To him also love had been born in an hour. It had flashed into existence as if from the fiat of the Divine.

He had fought against it. Like the crevices of old he had been scourged into the desert by remorse and another passion, but time had done its work. The woman he first loved had ministered not to the spiritual side of the man, or if she had so ministered in any degree it was because he had looked at her with a glamour of inexperience and youth. During those five years of solitude, of study and of reflection, the truth had gradually unrolled itself before him. Conclusions vastly at variance with what he had ever believed possible as to the woman upon whom he had first bestowed his heart, had gone into his being and were in solution there; this present woman was the precipitant which brought them to life. He knew now what the old appeal of his wife had been. He knew now what the new appeal of this woman was.

But honor and pride, held him back. How long would they continue to exercise dominion over him? Would the time come when his passion rising like a sea would thunder upon these artificial embankments of his soul, beat them down and sweep them away?

At first the disparity between their situations, not so much upon account of family or of property—the treasures of the mountains, hidden since creation he had discovered and let lie—but because of the youth and position of the woman compared to his own maturer years, his desperate experience, and his social withdrawal had reinforced his determination to live and love without a sign. But he had long since got beyond this. Had he been free he would have taken her like a viking of old, if he had to pluck her from amid a thousand swords and carry her to a beggar's hut which love would have turned to a palace. And she would have come with him on the same conditions.

He did not know that. Women have learned through centuries of weakness that fine art of concealment which man has never mastered. She never let him see what she thought of him. Yet he was not without suspicion; if that suspicion grew to certainty, would he control himself then?

At first he had sought to keep out of her way, but she had compelled him to come in. The room that was kitchen and bed room and store room for him was cheerless and somewhat cold. Save at night or when he was busy with other tasks outside they lived together in the great room. It was always warm, it was always bright, it was always cheerful, there.

The little piles of manuscript she had noted were books that he had written. He made no effort to conceal such things from her. He talked frankly enough about his life in the hills, indeed there was no possibility of avoiding the discussion of such topics. On but two subjects was he inexorably silent. One was the present state of his affections and the other was the why and wherefore of his lonely life. She knew beyond peradventure that he loved her, but she had no faint suspicion even as to the reason why he had become a recluse! He had never given her the slightest clew to his past save that admission that he had known Kirkby which was in itself nothing definitive and which she never connected with that package of letters which she still kept with her.

The man's mind was too active and fertile to be satisfied with manual labor alone, the books that he had written were scientific treatises in the main. One was a learned discussion of the fauna and flora of the mountains. Another was an exhaustive account of the mineral resources and geological formations of the range. He had only to allow a whisper, a suspicion of his discovery of gold and silver in the mountains to escape him, and the canons and crests alike would be filled with eager prospectors. Still a third work was a scientific analysis of the water powers in the canons.

He had willingly allowed her to read them all. Much of them she found technical and, aside from the fact that he had written them, uninteresting. But there was one book remaining in which he simply discussed the mountains in the various seasons of the year; when the snows covered them, when the grass and the moss came again, when the flowers bloomed, when autumn touched the trees. There was the soul of the man, poetry expressed in prose, manlike but none the less poetry for that.

This book pored over, she questioned him about it; they discussed it as they discussed Keats and the other poets. Those were happy evenings. She on one side of the fire sewing, her finger wound with cloth to hold his giant thimble, fashioning for herself some winter garments out of a gay colored, red, white and black ancient and exquisitely woven Navajo blanket, soft and pliable almost as an old-fashioned piece of satin—priceless if she had but known it—which he put at her disposal. While on the other side of the same homely blaze he made for her out of the skins of some of the animals that he had killed, a shapeless foot covering, half moccasin and wholly leggin, which she could wear over her shoes in her short excursions around the plateau and which would keep her feet warm and comfortable.

By her permission he smoked as he worked, enjoying the hour, putting aside the past and the future and for a few moments blissfully content, sometimes he laid aside his pipe and whatever work he was engaged upon and read to her from some immortal noble number. Sometimes the entertainment fell to her and she sang to him in her glorious contralto voice music that made him sad. Once he could stand it no longer. At the end of a burst of song which filled the little room—he had risen to his feet while she sang, compelled to the erect position by the magnificent melody—as the last notes died away and she smiled at him triumphant and expectant of his praise and his approval, he hurried himself out of the room and into the night, wrestling for hours with the storm which after all was but a trifling to that which raged in his bosom. While she, left alone and deserted, quailed within the silent room till she heard him come back.

Often and often when she slept quietly on one side the thin partition, he lay awake on the other, and sometimes his passion drove him forth to cool the fever, the fire in his soul in the icy, wintry air. The struggle within him preyed upon him, the keen loving eye of the woman searched his face, scrutinized him, looked into his heart, saw what was there.

She determined to end it, deciding that he must confess his affections. She had no premonition of the truth and no consideration of any evil consequences held her back. She could give free range to her love and her devotion. She had the ordering of their lives and she had the power to end the situation growing more and more impossible. She fancied the matter easily terminable. She thought she only to let him see her heart in such ways as a maiden may, to bring joy to his own to make him speak. She did not dream of the reality.

One night, therefore, a month or more after she had come, she resolved to end the uncertainty. She believed the easiest and the quickest way would be to get him to tell her why he was there. She naturally surmised that the woman of the picture, which she had never seen since the first day of her arrival, was in some measure the cause of it; and the only pain she had in the situation was the keen jealousy that would obtrude itself at the thought of that woman.

She remembered everything that he had said to her, and she recalled that he had once made the remark that he would treat her as he would have his wife treated if he had one, therefore whoever and whatever the picture of this woman was, she was not his wife. She might have been some one he had loved, but who had not loved him. She might have died. She was jealous of her, but she did not hate her.

After a long and painful effort the woman had completed the winter suit she had made for herself. He had advised her and had helped her. It was a belted tunic that fell to her knees; the red and black stripes ran around it, edged the broad collar, cuffed the warm sleeves and marked the graceful waist line. It was excessively becoming to her. He had been down into the valley, or the pocket, for a final inspection of the burros before the night, which promised to be severe, fell, and she had taken advantage of the opportunity to put it on.

She knew that she was beautiful; her determination to make this evening count had brought an unusual color to her cheeks, an unwonted sparkle to her eye. She stood up as she heard him enter the other room, she was standing erect as he came through the door and faced her. He had only seen her in the now somewhat shabby blue of her ordinary camp dress before, and her beauty fairly smote him in his face. He stood before her, wrapped in his fur great coat, snow and ice clinging to it, entranced. The woman smiled at the effect she produced.

"Take off your coat," she said gently approaching him. "Here, let me help you. Do you realize that I have been here over a month now? I want to have a little talk with you, I want you to tell me something."

Degeneration

The tragedies of early married life were illustrated in an incident that occurred not long ago in a Baltimore household.

A young wife sought out her mother-in-law with a most agonized expression and threw herself into a chair with an outburst of grief.

"Has anything happened to Henry?" anxiously asked the mother-in-law.

"He's taken to staying out at nights!" wailed the unhappy wife.

"It doesn't seem possible! How long has this been going on? How late does he stay away?"

"Well," sobbed the young woman, "you know he usually leaves the office at five o'clock. Night before last he did not get home until six, and last night he didn't set foot in the house until twenty minutes after six! Oh, what shall I do?" What shall I do?"—May Lippincott's.

The Demons Of The Swamp
are mosquitoes. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fits of fever. The appetite fails and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucerne, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50cts. at W. H. Windrow's.

Oh, You May Day!

What is there fresh a poet can say
On May?

How warble some novel way
To-day?

It's rather early to get gay
With "hail";

That chimeth in with "sunlit bay,"—
June lay.

But list! Sings now a Maytime fay,— Ah, nay,

'Tis but the umpire yelling "Play!"
Hooray!

New Fountain Notes.

BY NARRATOR.

ED. ANVIL HERALD:
The entertainment Thursday evening in the Methodist Church was well attended. The Epworth League rendered a well selected program, after which ice cream and cold drinks were sold on the place the proceeds of which went to the League.

Our merchant, C. J. Oefinger, while on his way to Yancey last Wednesday in Hondo met Hy. Kueck Jr. in his recently purchased car, and who asked
Mr. Oefinger to accompany him to Yancey with the promise to return him to New Fountain the next day should he have no other convenience.
True to his promise Mr. Kueck in his four passenger automobile brought him back the next day. Messrs. P. S.
Ward and Dr. B. B. Liles of Yancey accompanied them for pleasure sake, and Mr. Oefinger was well pleased with his ride.

Mrs. Paul Vogt and children, after a few weeks visit to relatives and friends in this vicinity, left today for San Antonio on a few days visit to relatives, before returning to their home in Alpine.

Otto Mumme was tendered a pleasant surprise party last Saturday night.
A big crowd was present; in fact, I found the crowd too big to mention everyone. Therefore, I shall mention none. Though every one seemed to have enjoyed themselves very much.
Two kegs of beer were on tap that quenched the thirst of a well sized crowd, while a merrier crowd of young people indulged in playing various games. At twelve o'clock coffee and delicious cakes were served and every 16, at the Wiemers pecan grove at New Fountain. Everybody invited.

About 24 inches of rain fell here since Saturday morning, which will keep crops growing and which came in time to mature the big oat crop that will soon be harvested. Considerable hail is reported to have fallen at Quihi.
Mr. Schorobin said that probably he will have to replant his entire crop.

F. D. Muennink, one day last week went over to Hondo and got him a new binder to be in readiness for the soon ripening oat crop.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Wiemers of Thousand Acre were here on a visit to relatives Sunday.

There is no doubt that they had a muddy road and their team a big load on their way home.
